

UNIVERSITY OF DAR ES SALAAM

MBEYA COLLEGE OF HEALTH AND ALLIED SCIENCES

SHORT COURSE ON MEDICAL HEALTH RESEARCH ETHICS

Background and rationale

Ethical considerations are one of the most important parts of any health research. Due to its importance, the World Health Organisation (WHO) developed guidelines called “International Guidelines for Biomedical Research Involving Human Subjects” in 1982. Using these guidelines, different countries have developed regulations in order to safeguard people who are involved in health researches. However, there is very limited knowledge on ethical issues involved in medical health researches among health researchers. To address this, the Mbeya College of Health and Allied Sciences (MCHAS) in collaboration with Mbeya Medical Research Centre (MMRC) of the National Institute for Medical Research (NIMR) is planning to conduct a short training of Medical health research ethics course from 6th-7th February 2020 in Mbeya.

Objectives

The main objective of this course is to train health professionals in essential basic principles of medical health research ethics. The course beneficiaries are expected to be medical health researchers, health program staff, project researchers, lecturers, regional and district health management teams, medical graduate and postgraduate students.

Fees

The fee for this course is TZS 150,000 only that will cover training fee and materials, breakfast, lunch, afternoon tea and certificates at the end of the training. Participants will cover themselves for accommodation and transport. Students will enjoy a 20% discount.

Registration

Deadline for registration and payment for the course is 15th January 2020. Please register through email bioethicstraining@gmail.com to confirm reservation.

Mode of Payment

After registration and confirming reservation, you will receive email with instruction of how to pay your registration fees.

For any enquiries please call: +255-754542698 or send email through: massue.dennis@udsm.ac.tz or mcharo7@hotmail.com