CLARIFICATION: SPECIAL AND SUPPLEMENTARY EXAMINATIONS HAVE NOT BEEN ABOLISHED

The University of Dar es Salaam (UDSM) has noted information circulating on social media claiming that special and supplementary examinations have been abolished at the University. UDSM wishes to inform the public, particularly students, that this claim is not true.

Special and supplementary examinations remain in place and will continue to be offered. What has changed is when they are conducted. In order to improve academic efficiency, they will now be held within the regular academic almanac of the University. This change does not lower examination standards or alter progression requirements.

All other examination requirements, including GPA requirements, remain unchanged and will continue to apply in accordance with the existing General University Examination Regulations.

Students are reminded to observe prerequisite course requirements and to consult their respective academic units for guidance on their examination status, course availability and the procedures for clearing outstanding examinations.

The University urges the public to disregard the misleading information and to rely on official UDSM communication channels, including the University website (www.udsm.ac.tz), for accurate information.
